

About the show: “Unnecessary Farce”

Type of comedy: Farce

Plot: Snatched from today’s headlines: a shocking incident, headlines screaming that police officers used “unnecessary force” ...Oops, wait a minute; the title of the show is UNNECESSARY FARCE! That’s something entirely different! Here’s all you have to know about Unnecessary Farce: two cops, three crooks, eight doors, go! This show is so funny it should be illegal!

Situations: Extremely funny but adult situations with some sexual tension between two characters. There might be a girl running around in a slip. Relax and get ready for some risqué humor and ridiculously funny situations.

Language: Yes, some... but not the really bad ones!

We think this play is suitable for: Those who are 16 or older and are able to relax while watching risqué and crazy situations. If that describes you, you will love this play!

We think you should avoid this play if: Any discussion of adult sexuality offends you, or if you have zero tolerance for profanity (there will be some “hells” and “damns”).

If this were a movie, it would be rated: R (for slightly Risqué and Ridiculous)
